Retirement Consulting

Pension and other retirement plans have enormous financial implications for employers. Aon actuaries work directly with our clients' management teams to assess the short and long-term costs associated with these commitments. Some of the most important projects that actuarial consultants at Aon work on are the annual pension "valuations." Each year, the actuary collects census data from the clients and performs the annual valuation. With the results of these valuations, we help our clients assess the ongoing financial health of their pension plans.

In addition to the pension valuation process, we work regularly with clients in the human resource and financial areas, and meet with them frequently to present the results of our analysis. Some of the other projects actuarial consultants at Aon become involved with include:

- Projections (both stochastic and deterministic) of long-term financial information for pension and other post-retirement benefit plans;
- Merger and acquisition "due diligence" and related activities;
- Design and costing of new retirement programs;
- Development of leading-edge pension administration systems;
- Union negotiation support and analysis; and
- Quantitative comparison of comprehensive employee benefit programs for groups of employers.
